Richard Dutu, Ph.D

Richard Dutu is an economist on the Indonesia desk at the OECD, the Paris-based Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development. After graduating with a PhD in Economics from the University of Paris, he worked for several years in academia in Australia and New Zealand before moving to Mongolia as a consultant for the World Bank. Over the years he built a strong expertise in developing, resource-rich economies and how to best harness the growth potential of their natural endowments.
